PROFILE

Matthew’s personal injury practice is concentrated in multi-track litigation. He is adept at handling high value litigation in claims exceeding six figure sums and is instructed in cases exceeding £1 million. His work is split evenly between claimants and defendants.

Matthew is a trial lawyer. He is frequently instructed in liability disputes at trial where complex cross examination or technical legal submissions are involved. Matthew is regularly instructed to attend joint settlement meetings to negotiate large loss quantum disputes.

He has particular expertise in the following areas:

1. Brain damage cases requiring significant care regimes, periodical payments and accommodation claims.
2. Clinical negligence claims arising out of inept surgery; failed vasectomy, finger tendon repair, breast surgery, knee surgery and fatality consequent upon inadequate nursing care.
3. Fatal Accident Act cases including dependency claims.
4. Industrial Disease litigation covering the full spectrum including asbestos exposure, HAVS, dermatitis and repetitive strain injuries.
5. High value disputes in medical evidence concerning the future earning capacity of badly injured claimants.

Matthew advises and acts in high value, serious fraud proceedings particularly organised rings of fraudulent individuals and institutions often with a value exceeding £1 million. He also acts in cases involving malingering and false accounting.

He is fully conversant with insurance law principles and acts in claims for breach of insurance contracts frequently in cases involving breach of the utmost good faith.

NOTABLE CASES
